Gozo Shioda

The late Gozo Shioda Sensei, 10th Degree Black Belt was the foremost student of Morihei Ueshiba who developed Aikido from the lethal techniques of aiki-jujutsu in the 1920's. Shioda Sensei founded the school of Yoshinkan Aikido in Tokyo. His outstanding contribution to the promotion of Japanese Martial arts in general and Aikido in particular was further acknowledged by the honorary award of tenth dan by the International Martial arts Federation in 1984, along with the title of Meijin or Grand master.

Yoshinkan Aikido

Since the 1920's several styles of Aikido have developed. The study of Yoshinkan Aikido incorporates precision in executing techniques with the study of basic movements. Detailed instruction provides an understanding of the whole technique as well as its composite parts, exploring the mystery of how a partner's attack can be re-directed and controlled without strength. Yoshinkan Aikido is the official style of Aikido practiced by the Tokyo Metropolitan Police Department.

The Traditional Martial Art

Non-violent, Non-competitive. Derived from the combat aiki-jujutsu techniques of ancient Japan. Aikido is termed the "Traditional Martial Art" because it places an emphasis on the development of harmony and co-operation rather than competition and the violent subduing of opponents. Aikido translates as 'the way of harmony'.

International Yoshinkan Aikido Federation (IYAF)

In 1989, Shioda Sensei founded the International Yoshinkan Aikido Federation, the aim of which is to support the growth and teaching of Aikido on a worldwide basis. The IYAF embodies the Aikido principles of harmony, co-operation and respect within an organisation.

Michiharu Mori Shihan is a 7th Dan black belt instructor recognised by the IYAF. His student's gradings are recognised in Japan and throughout the world via the IYAF.

Students who attain the rank of black belt will receive their dan certificates from the International Yoshinkan Headquarters in Japan.

Mori Shihan has the qualification of "HIGHLY ADVANCED INSTRUCTOR" issued from the Honbu Dojo which allows him to grade his students to the level of 5th Dan.
